Greetings to all!

As spring rolls into summer here in the Northern Hemisphere, seeds planted earlier begin to sprout. We are delighted to announce the impending release of the Mountain Life Series by Livable Future Podcasts, featuring voices from the Mountain Sentinels community. The first episode will feature the creative and talented Mountain Sentinels Fellow Tiffany Pyette. If her name sounds familiar, you may remember her from our January, 2023 Community Spotlight. In the podcast, Tiffany speaks to Cody Sanford about her work with her community in the Appalachian Mountains.

Across the globe, our mountain advocacy friends and allies are also releasing information in fun and creative ways. This edition of the newsletter points to videos, summer school courses, and the exciting news of ICIMOD's updated strategic plan to meet the urgent demands of rapid climate change in the Hindu Kush Himalayan (HKH) region.

Members of the Mountain Sentinels leadership team are working on their respective projects in Honduras, Peru, and Mongolia. Though the geography varies, the commitment to work with members of local communities to seek sustainable solutions remains steady.

As always, you are invited to let us know what you have been up to during this shoulder season! Email us at info@mountainsentinels.org, drop into our office hours, or suggest a blog topic.

RESTORE Documentary series sheds light on growing populations of snow leopards, gorillas, and bears in Mountains

We are experiencing a dangerous decline in nature: One million species are threatened with extinction, soils are turning infertile and water sources are drying up. But there are glimmers of hope: Mountain regions face unique challenges. Climate change is melting glaciers, eroding soils and driving species uphill – often toward extinction. Yet, in Uganda, Rwanda, Serbia and Kyrgyzstan vulnerable animal species are bouncing back. Watch to learn how mountain countries are creating opportunities for people – to help nature recover.
